CROSSING COUNTRIES

Baillie Lodges has officially branched out beyond Australia's (tightly-held) borders. Vancouver Island's acclaimed luxury camp Clayoquot Wilderness Resort has joined the luxury lodge collection's growing portfolio, marking the company's international launch. Remotely located among Vancouver Island's pristine wilderness and on the shores of beautiful Clayoquot Sound, the acclaimed, soon-to-be-renamed Clayoquot Wilderness Lodge is accessible only by seaplane, helicopter or boat. When it reopens following a refurbishment on 13 May 2021, the retreat will feature an exclusive 25 luxury tents. Meanwhile, acclaimed Huka Lodge on the North Island of New Zealand is now also part of the Baillie portfolio, joining a roster of properties that are as much about the destination as the accommodation experience. clayoquotwildernesslodge.com hukalodge.co.nz baillielodges.com.au

TO THE POINTS

Qantas Frequent Flyers can now earn and use Qantas Points on premium rail journeys around Australia, including The Chan, Indian Pacific and Great Southern. For every $1 spent, Qantas Frequent Flyers will earn one point. "Ninety per cent of our members want to use their points for travel, so the ability to explore the country by rail is an exciting alternative for Frequent Flyers and a real drawcard for our program," Qantas Loyalty CEO, Olivia Wirth, said. qantas.com

Art for a cause

American architect and interior designer Bill Bensley, known for his eye-catching hotel designs, has turned his talents to painting. Inspired and taught by Caribbean-based artist Kate Spencer, Bensley says he "picked up his paintbrush and easel, and fell down the rabbit hole". The Bangkok-based creative dabbles in a mix of mediums including watercolours, acrylics, oil and pastels. His fauvist style is bursting with beautiful, bold colours and delightful forms. After amassing a collection of more than 100 artworks, Bensley is now selling both originals and prints in order to raise funds for the Shinta Mani Foundation and Wildlife Alliance. Up to 60 of his latest works are now on display in the Bensley Outsider Gallery in Bangkok. A second gallery will open in February 2021 at the InterContinental Danang Sun Peninsula Resort in Vietnam. bensley.com
